The public will then be forced to take what they need, not what they are willing to accept; colleges will be encouraged to produce but proper men; dentists compelled to obtain a complete knowledge of their profession alone; and the bone of contention removed forever from physicians. Another legal error needs correcting. The law has declared dentistry to be an independent profession by sanctioning a peculiar and-separate degree--D. D.S.to be conferred upon those supposed to be fitted for practice. At a subsequent time the law has confirmed her previous opiryon, in permitting the enactment of laws to regulate the practice of dentistry. But, no provision has been made by which, in cases terminating fatally while under the care of a thus legally qualified dentist, he may be enabled to close his connection with the case with dignity and safety...
