Not illustrated. 1921 Excerpt: . not want half-baked engineers, psuedo-engineers, liberal arts or science students who have pursued courses in advanced mathematics, mechanics and surveying but that they want full-fledged engineering graduates who in addition have some conception of news writing and fundamental publicity methods. When all engineers recognize news when they see it. when the average engineer can write a half column news story in less than an hour with a reasonable degree of certainty that it will be acceptable in the city room of the local newspaper the problem of engineering publicity will take care of itself. Incidentally we believe that it isn t going to hurt his economic condition to have the world know a little more about what the engineer is doing. One Course Concrete Sidewalk Construction at Seattle, Wash., . As a result of the experience gained from short experimental stretches of walk built during the past few years and from concrete street pavements, the city of Seattle ha? adopted specifications for 1-course concrete sidewalk construction. The specifications were written In the conviction that a more durable and satisfactory walk could be built under the 1-course method than is possible with the old 2course type. An analysis of the quantities of materials required indicated that the 1-course sidewalk could be built at practically the same cost as the 2-course. The following particulars regarding this departure from ordinary practice are taken from an article by Mr. O. A. Piper, District Engineer. City Engineer s Department, in...
