Pursuant to a congressional request, GAO reviewed the Department of Justice's (DOJ) fiscal year (FY) 2000 performance plan, which was submitted to Congress in response to the Government Performance and Results Act of 1993, focusing on: (1) assessing the usefulness of the agency's plan for decisionmaking; and (2) identifying the degree of improvement the agency's FY 2000 performance plan represents over the FY 1999 plan. GAO noted that: (1) DOJ's FY 2000 performance plan provides a general picture of intended performance across DOJ, a general discussion of strategies and resources DOJ will use to achieve its goals, and general confidence that DOJ's performance information will be credible; (2) however, the plan did not identify mutually reinforcing goals and measures; (3) an illustration of intended performance is the Tax Division's use of the Internal Revenue Services compliance rate measure of its success in reaching its goal to maximize deterrence and foster voluntary taxpayer compliance; (4) also, to ensure credible performance information, DOJ will be assessing data quality, consistency, and reliability, and collecting, verifying, and analyzing performance data; (5) however, a summary performance...
