Not illustrated. 1894 Excerpt: .manfully against the handicap of a consciousness of the weakness of their course, and gave entertaining descriptions of some of the less attractive features of a study and practice of pharmacy, there could be only one answer to the question. Of course it pays to study pharmacy--with as good an institution as the St. Louis College of Pharmacy. THE English, the German and the French are the languages of science. This fact should be recognized by those who are entrusted with the education of youths desirous of entering the medical profese sion. It is much wiser to spend two years in a pre anjuaScs o medical course based upon the future intentions of a Science. boy than tQ adliere blindly to the dictum, that only classical education can fit the mind for the study of a profession. Now that all reputable schools of medicine will shortly require four courses of lectures, the necessity of abridging the pre-medical course is strongly felt by many young men. Few have the time and means to pass four years in a literary school before entering a medical college. It would seem wise that the student, after passing three years in pre-medical work, should be permitted to graduate in arts at the end of his first year, in the medical school. With the possible enactment of more stringent medical legislation in the near future, and the consequent lengthening of the medical course to five years, the necessity of adopting a method...
