Not illustrated. 1893 Excerpt: .a sheet of paper, mounted on card board, a dozen pins with different colored heads and inks of corresponding shades. To represent Washington and Howe at Boston, stick a blueheaded pin on Dorchester Heights, and a red-headed one within the city. When the latter General evacuates, remove his pin representative to Halifax, and trace hit course thither with red ink or crayon. At that place also, stick another pin of similar shade, to represent the Admiral who here joined General Howe with reinforcements from England. Then, as the war proceeds with the attack on Ft. Moultrie, with another pin represent Gen. Clinton, and trace his course by sea to his new position off New York. Thither also bring the two pins Howes from Halifax, and Washington from Boston, tracing bis line of march with blue, and theirs with red. Thus proceed with the entire account, taking care to have only similar colors on a side. Black, and shades of blue and purple for American leaders, and reds and browns for the English. Use the board map at times of recitation, moving the pins and tracing movements as the recitation demands. Have the pupils reproduce this work, from memory, upon their Individual maps, drawn by themselves upon the sheets of mounted paper, but, of course, always subject to your criticism and correction. The colors, pinB and large maps, furnish a more stimulating study, and better knowlege of the geographical positions of armies than do the tiny black...
